Hello,

My name is Lilly Henley, I am a diver, surfer and marine scientist with nine generations of family history in the D'Entrecasteaux Channel, Tasmania. I care deeply about Lutruwita/Tasmania's coasts.

I have some concerns with the draft study plan, and believe the following points require some more consideration in their framing for the study to genuinely achieve its goal of assessing effectiveness of the industries regulation and impacts:

1. The draft Study Plan currently appears to assume that salmon farming will continue in its current form. A genuinely independent review should assess whether the industry can operate without impacts on the environment, communities and other industries, and explicitly consider other outcomes such as industry reduction or phase-out.
2. Public health and community wellbeing are not considered enough, please consider the impacts of things like noise and light pollution and other impacts to wellbeing and mental health as well as impacts to physical health.
3. Public face-to-face community consultations must occur throughout the study.
4. Investigate regulatory capture and transparency around lobbying and influence, including community trust in decision-making processes.
5. Modes of engagement are currently skewed towards positive perspectives on industry, neutral language throughout the study.
6. Little time for public comment and independent scrutiny once findings are released - public release of information as it comes.

Thank you for considering these points and undertaking the study with public submissions and community in mind.

Warm regards
Lilly Henley
